Here are five tips for seniors to follow to stay healthy and safe during the colder seasons.

1. Get the flu vaccine. The Centers for Disease Control (CDC) recommends that adults aged 65 and older get a flu vaccine each year, ideally by the end of October. While the flu shot is recommended for every person above six months of age, seniors are especially at risk for complications from the flu, such as pneumonia, bronchitis and ear infections. The flu can also make any chronic health problems worse. There are two types of flu shots specially designed for seniors. Ask your health care provider which one would be best for you.
2. Be wary of tripping hazards. People generally experience stiffer joints in colder weather. Not only might it be a bit harder to move around, but it gets dark out early, the ground is often wet or frozen, and fallen leaves create slipping hazards or even cover up hazardous rocks that you can trip on. Make sure leaves are cleared from sidewalks and driveways on your property and that all walkways are illuminated to reduce your chances of a fall. Sprinkle cat litter or sand on icy sidewalks. Stretch before going outside to warm up stiff muscles. You can learn tips for preventing falls inside of the home here.
3. Stay warm. As you get older, your risk of suffering hypothermia goes up. Hypothermia can be a life-threatening condition that occurs when an individual's body temperature drops below normal and remains low for a period of time. Being over the age of 60, having health conditions like diabetes or hypothyroidism, and taking certain medications all make you more susceptible to the cold. You can develop hypothermia even after exposure to mild cold temperatures, according to the National Institutes of Health. Dress in layered, loose-fitting clothing. Dress warmly and wear a hat when going outside. Keep your indoor temperature at a minimum of 68 degrees Fahrenheit. If you need help paying your heating bills, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services may be able to help. The Eldercare Locator is a tool from the U.S. government to help connect you with agencies that can help.
4. Protect your skin. Indoor air becomes arid thanks to household heating systems. With age, our skin gets thinner and more prone to dryness and tears that can lead to infections. Stay hydrated by drinking plenty of fluids and eating soup. Using a humidifier indoors can go a long way toward putting some much-needed moisture back into the air. Also, make sure to help keep your skin from drying out with lotion or cream.
5. Eliminate fire risks. Check that electrical appliances like electrical blankets are in good condition without fraying cords. Space heaters are common sources of fires. Make sure they're placed far away from flammable surfaces. Autumn is an excellent time to check the batteries in your smoke and carbon monoxide detectors. Also, be sure to have working fire extinguishers in the kitchen and near any fireplaces.

Logical people are left-brained, and creative people are right-brained, or so goes the persistent myth, a myth so popular that October had been declared Right Brainers Rule! Month. The idea that the brain has two different hemispheres and that people lean more favorably to one side than the other was largely perpetuated by research conducted in the 1960s. Those suffering from severe epilepsy had the bridge of nerves that connects both sides cut, and doctors showed that each side could act independently of the other. Of course, most of us have our bridges left intact, allowing both sides of our brain to operate together and function in integrated and coordinated ways. For this reason, there is no such thing as a truly right- or left-brained person.

The Funny Pages

Be sure to pick up a newspaper on October 18 so that you can celebrate Newspaper Comic Strip Appreciation Day. The very first comic strips appeared in the giant rivals of New York's newspaper industry during the 19th century. Joseph Pulitzer's

New York World featured the first comic strip in 1894, The Yellow Kid, about a down-on-his-luck boy who hung out in Hogan's Alley. Two short years later, William Randolph Hearst's Morning Journal jumped on the comic strip bandwagon and introduced a weekly full-color comic strip supplement. Hearst even went so far as to lure The Yellow Kid and his creator Richard Outcault away from the New York World.

By 1897, comics were in high demand, and Hearst meant to capitalize on the phenomenon. He called upon Rudolph Dirks to create a new strip for the Sunday edition of his New York Journal. The strip followed two boys, Hans and Fritz, who were constantly running into trouble with their parents and schoolteachers. The Katzenjammer Kids, which ran continuously from 1897 to 2006, remains the longest-running comic strip in history.

Soon, all newspapers wanted in on the comic strip act. In 1915, the San Francisco Chronicle debuted the first daily black-and-white comic, Bud Fisher's Mr. A. Mutt, which would later become Mutt and Jeff. Classics like Gasoline Alley, Popeye, Krazy Kat, Dick Tracy, Li'l Abner, and Blondie began to appear all across the country thanks to syndication. It was only a matter of time before publishers realized that they could create entire books from comics. Detective Comics and Action Comics soon spawned enduring heroes like Batman and Superman. Even Walt Disney, that beloved master of on-screen animation, started serving audiences a Mickey Mouse daily comic strip in 1930. Lucky for us all, comic strips endure with an almost unlimited variety. All we have to do is pick up any newspaper to find our favorite comic characters.

Your Stamp on the World

October is Stamp Collecting Month, so grab your magnifying glass and join the millions of people worldwide who collect, catalogue, and admire these miniature works of art. There is an almost infinite variety of stamps issued by countries around the world. Some are worth only a few cents, but others can be very valuable. The rarest stamp, issued in British Guiana in 1856 and known as the One Cent Magenta, was purchased by a collector in 1980 for $935,000. While for some stamp collecting is a playful hobby, for others it is an expensive obsession. Just as great works of art are forged, so are great stamps. The greatest stamp forger of all time was the Italian Jean de Sperati. He grew up in a family of printers and mastered the trade, but he turned those skills into becoming a master counterfeiter of stamps. His forgeries are so perfect that they have become works of art in their own right. Some professionals cannot even tell the difference between his fakes and the real thing. In some cases, a Sperati forgery is worth even more than the original stamp.

A Howling Good Time

Falling just a few days before Halloween, October 26 is Howl at the Moon Night. To hear a pack of wolves howling at the moon might make your hair stand on end, but there is really no scientific evidence to show that wolves do howl specifically at the moon. The truth is that wolves howl for a variety of reasons, none of which have to do with the moon. Some howl when they are lonesome. Some howl in confrontation. Others howl to share their location or to warn of danger. The howling of a pack is done to exaggerate their numbers to rivals. Interestingly, wolves have been associated with the moon since ancient times. So, too, have werewolves, that gruesome transformation of people into wolves. Luckily, werewolves are also just a myth.

A Big Thank You

I would like to thank each and every one of you for all that you do. I appreciate all of the feedback and suggestions that you have given to me. It is greatly appreciated. I am very happy to be working with each and every one of you.

Tenant Parking

Please remember that parking is for tenants only. Please remind visitors and health care workers that they must park in the visitor spots that are located at each property and the properties that do not have visitor parking, visitors must park on the street. Thank you.

Volunteering

If anyone would like to volunteer and help with activities and delivering the monthly newsletter please give Lynn King, RSC a call at 413-297-8058. I would love to have more of the residents involved.

Suggestions/Comments

Please remember there is a suggestion box located in each community room and one located in front of the Resident Service Coordinator office door. Please feel free to leave a suggestion or comment for me on activities that you would like to see happen at your site.

Giants Among Us

On October 2, 1969, President Lyndon Johnson signed a bill creating Redwoods National Park in California. While it is estimated that over two million acres of old growth redwoods once existed along California's coast, today 133,000 acres of those remaining forests are protected as national and state parks. The coastal living conditions for these trees are perfect, and they get much of their water from the thick fog that rolls in off the coast. These trees are the tallest on Earth, and as such are the world's tallest living things. Take the redwood known as "Hyperion." Standing at 379 feet tall, it is the tallest known tree in the world. The tree is hidden deep within a rugged and inaccessible section of Redwood National Park and is considered so valuable that its location has not been disclosed so as to discourage visitors and vandals alike.
